SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

For Dyspepsia Costiveness, Sick Headache, Chronic Diarrhœa, Jaundice, Impurity of the Blood, Fever and Ague, Malaria, and all Diseases caused by Derangement of Liver, Bowels and Kidneys.

SYMPTOMS OF A DISEASED LIVER.
Bad Breath; Pain in the Side, sometimes the pain is felt under the Shoulder-blade, mistaken for Rheumatism; general loss of appetite; Bowels generally costive, sometimes alternating with lax; the head is troubled with pain, is dull and heavy, with considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of having undone something which ought to have been done; a slight, dry cough and flushed face is sometimes an attendant, often mistaken for consumption; the patient complains of weariness and debility; nervous, easily startled; feet cold or burning, sometimes a prickly sensation of the skin exists; spirits are low and despondent, and, although satisfied that exercise would be beneficial, yet one can hardly summon up fortitude to try it—in fact, distrusts every remedy. Several of the above symptoms attend the disease, but cases have occurred when but few of them existed, yet examination after death has shown the Liver to have been extensively deranged.

It should be used by all persons, old and young, whenever any of the above symptoms appear.

Persons Traveling or Living in Unhealthy Localities, by taking a dose occasionally to keep the Liver in healthy action, will avoid all Malaria, Bilious attacks, Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Depression of Spirits, etc. It will invigorate like a glass of wine, but is no intoxicating beverage.

If You have eaten anything hard of digestion, or feel heavy after meals, or sleepless at night, take a dose and you will be relieved.

Time and Doctors' Bills will be saved by always keeping the Regulator in the House!

For, whatever the ailment may be, a thoroughly safe purgative, alterative and tonic can never be out of place. The remedy is harmless and does not interfere with business or pleasure.

IT IS PURELY VEGETABLE,
And has all the power and efficacy of Calomel or Quinine, without any of the injurious after effects.

A Governor's Testimony.
Simmons Liver Regulator has been in use in my family for some time, and I am satisfied it is a valuable addition to the medical science.
J. GILL SHORTER, Governor of Ala.

Hon. Alexander H. Stephens, of Ga., says: Have derived some benefit from the use of Simmons Liver Regulator, and wish to give it a further trial.

"The only Thing that never fails to Relieve."—I have used many remedies for Dyspepsia, Liver Affection and Debility, but never have found anything to benefit me to the extent Simmons Liver Regulator has. I sent from Minnesota to Georgia for it, and would send further for such a medicine, and would advise all who are similarly affected to give it a trial as it seems the only thing that never fails to relieve.
P. M. JASNEY, Minneapolis, Minn.

Dr. T. W. Mason says: From actual experience in the use of Simmons Liver Regulator in my practice I have been and am satisfied to use and prescribe it as a purgative medicine.

A NOTED BUT UNTITLED WOMAN.
[From the Boston Globe.]

Messrs. Editors:—
The above is a good likeness of Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., who above all other human beings is gratefully called the "Dear Friend of Woman," as one of her correspondents love to call her. She is entirely devoted to her work, which is the outcome of a life study, and is obliged to keep six lady assistants, to help her answer the large correspondence which daily comes to upon her, each bearing its special burden of woe, pain, or joy at release from it. Her Vegetable Compound is a medicine for good and not evil purposes. I have personally investigated it and am satisfied of the truth of this.
On account of its proven merits, it is recommended as unexcelled by the best physicians in the country. One says: "It works like a charm and saves much pain. It will cure entirely the worst form of falling of the uterus, Leucorrhœa, Irregular and painful Menstruation, all Ovarian Troubles, Inflammation and Ulceration, Floodings, all Displacements and the consequent spinal weakness, and is especially adapted to the Change of Life."
It permeates every portion of the system, and gives new life and vigor. It removes faintness, flatulency, destroys all craving for stimulants, and relieves weakness of the stomach. It cures Bloating, Headaches, Nervous Prostration, General Debility, Sleeplessness, Depression and Indigestion. That feeling of bearing down, causing pain, weight and backache, is always permanently cured by its use. It will at all times, and under all circumstances, act in harmony with the law that governs the female system.
It costs only $1. per bottle or six for $5., and is sold by druggists. Any advice required as to special cases, and the names of many who have been restored to perfect health by the use of the Vegetable Compound, can be obtained by addressing Mrs. P., with stamp for reply, at her home in Lynn, Mass.
For Kidney Complaint of either sex this compound is unsurpassed as abundant testimonials show.
"Mrs. Pinkham's Liver Pills," says one writer, "are the best in the world for the cure of Constipation, Biliousness and Torpidity of the liver. Her Blood Purifier works wonders in its special line and bids fair to equal the Compound in its popularity.
All must respect her as an Angel of Mercy whose sole ambition is to do good to others.

SELECT STORY.

THE MINISTER AT SCRAGG END.

Scragg End suddenly awoke to the knowledge that it was a village. Hitherto it had clung to the skirts of Ponkapawket and had never thought of the possibility of a separate existence. The soil was poor in that part of the town, and it had been a hard struggle to wring a living from it; the place was unhealthy, too, and "as spindlin' as a Scragg Ender" was a household saying at Ponkapawket.

They had a school at Scragg End at certain seasons of the year, because Ponkapawket built them a school house and appropriated to their use a certain part of the school money, but they did all their shopping in Ponkapawket and relied upon that village for those servants of society generally regarded as indispensable, the doctor, the lawyer and the minister. Rather strangely, it was the want of the last mentioned of these servants that awoke Scragg End to a sense of its rights.

Old Miss Critchett, who had been in ill health for several months, suddenly discovered that she had a spine in her back, and was not long for this world, and wanted Gospel privileges before she died. Miss Angella Lawton, who was held in high esteem because her father had been the minister of Ponkapawket, declared that she didn't think Mr. Ericson, the present minister of Ponkapawket, who now and then preached in the Scragg End school house on a Sunday afternoon or evening, was "spiritual," because he wore a ring on his finger, and she "didn't feel to sit under" him any more. And good old Mrs. Simmons, who walked all the way to Ponkapawket to church every pleasant Sunday, said she had always known that "until it was watered by the droppings of the sanctuary, Scragg End would not prosper."

And Scragg End suddenly decided that instead of occasional preaching by the Ponkapawket minister it was entitled to "a stated supply." No longer would it go without regular Gospel privileges. Adoniram Hewitt, whose father had been a deacon, was deputed to make application to the proper authorities in that denomination to which Scragg End almost universally belonged for a minister to supply the Scragg End pulpit, or rather a school desk, until a church should be built.

Adoniram Hewitt received an encouraging answer to his application. A very earnest and talented young preacher, lately graduated from a theological seminary, would at once be sent to Scragg End. Some of the older people demurred a little; they "didn't think much of 'prentice hands," but the people generally thought a young minister was much more interesting.

Interest and curiosity were at their height in Scragg End on the day when Lysander Hewitt, Adoniram's son, drove over to Ponkapawket Station to bring back the new minister. Innumerable guesses had been made among the younger portion of the community concerning the appearance of the new parson. It was generally agreed upon by the young ladies that he would be slender, with dark eyes, a melodious voice, and very white hands, and they embroidered several very handsome book-marks for the Bible and Hymn Book, which were purchased for the desk—Mr. Ericson had been obliged to bring his own—and an elegant satin cushion to rest them on.

The minister was to board at Adoniram Hewitt's, the Hewitts being well-to-do beyond the majority of Scragg End people, and being regarded as possessing book learning, which would make them congenial companions for a minister, for Adoniram in his youthful days had been sent to an academy where Latin was taught, and Lysander, his son, had fitted himself for college, and only been prevented from working his way through by the illness of his father, which made it necessary for him to remain on the farm. Moreover, the Hewitts kept a "hired girl"—a very useful luxury at Scragg End; and both Mrs. Hewitt and Roxy, the girl, were famous cooks, and ministers were but men in the matter of eating, however spiritually-minded they might be; indeed, Miss Hepsy Jackson, who was greatly given to attending county conferences, had observed that "the piouser they were the more they ate." But this was generally regarded as sacrilegious, and it was remembered that Miss Hepsy was not a "professor," though she had such zeal in the matter of county conferences.

Adoniram Hewitt's house presented a holiday appearance on that summer afternoon when Lysander drove over to Ponkapawket Station to bring back the minister. The best room was thrown open, there were flowers everywhere. Mrs. Hewitt had on her best cap, and the pantry shelves were lined with good things to eat, in such quantities as to lead one to the belief that Mrs. Hepsy Jackson's words had had their weight. All Scragg End was at its windows and doors. Mrs Hewitt stood on her door-steps, her cap strings fluttering in the breeze.

"I do hope Lysander hasn't forgotten to get a new box of blacking. Of course the minister will want his boots very shiny," she said to herself.

Just at that moment Lysander drove up with only a girl beside him. What could be the reason that the minister had not come? The young lady was a stranger. She had probably come to visit some one at Scragg End, and as there was nobody to meet her at the station Lysander had brought her over. But he was helping her to alight at their own gate. She was walking up the path. Mrs. Hewitt adjusted her glasses and satisfied herself that the face was unfamiliar. She was a grave and dignified young woman, with a self-possessed manner, but with a bright flush on her face. Why didn't Lysander come up and introduce her instead of attending to the horse?

"I suppose you were expecting me," said the young lady, extending her hand in a friendly way. "I am the new minister—Miss Barton."

As Mrs. Hewitt afterward declared, "you could have knocked her down with a feather." And her overwhelming astonishment was so plainly shown that the new minister became very much embarrassed.

"Of course you knew—certainly you ought to have been told that—that I was a woman," she said.

"We didn't know. Why we never thought of such a thing. They didn't say a word about it," exclaimed Mrs Hewitt, and in her astonishment and dismay she utterly ignored the outstretched hand.

The young lady had a strong and resolute face, but Mrs. Hewitt suddenly became aware that the corners of her mouth were drooping, and there was a hurt as well as a weary look in her eyes, and all her motherly compassion was aroused.

"But it don't make any difference, child—I mean ma'am. I've no doubt you can preach as well as half the men. We know what is going on in the world, if we do live a good ways out of it: only there never did happen to be a woman preacher anywhere about here, so it took me by surprise. We believe in giving women a fair chance, here in a Scragg End, I can tell you."

"I was afraid you might have objection," said the young lady, a smile chasing the weariness out of her face.

"Oh, we shall think everything of you, I've no doubt—after a while. You don't know what it is to be without regular preaching as long as we have. Come right in and get rested and have a cup of tea, for I expect you have had a hard journey."

Before escorting her guest to her room, Mrs. Hewitt managed to slip up stairs and slyly abstract Lysander's new shaving set from the toilette table, where she had placed it for the convenience of the new minister.

It is undeniable that at the first receipt of the news a general dismay overspread Scragg End. The older people were disposed to consider that a trick had been played upon them, and were angry accordingly, some even going so far as to wish to have Miss Barton told that her services could be dispensed with. But nobody seemed willing to tell her, and there was a great curiosity to hear her preach. There were a few courageous spirits who openly avowed that they saw no reason why a woman should not preach, and they were glad to have one for a minister. Many complained of Miss Barton's youth, but acknowledged that they would not have objected on that score to a young man of twenty-six or twenty-seven, which was her age.

There was some who thought she was too handsome for a minister, and others who thought that since she was going to set herself up for everybody to look at, it was a pity she was not handsomer; some who thought women ought not to preach at all, others who thought some women might be allowed to, but that Miss Barton was not of the right kind. It was tacitly agreed that she should be given a hearing, but a woman minister as a stated supply was not what was wanted.

But in two Sundays Miss Barton conquered Scragg End, except a few of the most prejudiced, who would never own themselves conquered. She was so simple, so earnest, so sympathetic. There were no long words, no far-fetched analogies, such as Mr. Ericson used; there was no rattling of the dry bones of theology; she touched the chords that vibrated in their every-day life.

"She comes right home to you, that's a fact," said Joshua Ring. "She's scriptooral, too, and she makes as feelin' a prayer as ever I heard. I don't like to see a woman in the pulpit, and I ain't a goung to say I do, but she's edifying and no mistake."

"I never went to meetin' before when I didn't have terrible hard work to keep from noddin', but somehow her talk is plain and sensible and keeps me awake," said Luke Pettingill, who was wont to disturb the congregation by audible breathing.

People flocked to Scragg End from far and near to hear the new minister, at first with much the same curiosity that they would have shown to see a white elephant, but soon for the sake of the preaching. Nobody could quite explain Miss Barton's popularity. Perhaps old Mrs. Simons came as near to the the truth as anybody when she said, "she wasn't any smarter than anybody else, but someway she seemed just like our own folks. And she knew just how folks felt without being told."

Ponkapawket was scandalized. It was a disgrace to the whole town to have a woman preacher holding forth every Sunday, and drawing such crowds—drawing half the congregation away from the Ponkapawket church, too. The deacons requested Mr. Ericson to preach a sermon from the text, "Let your women keep silence in the churches." Mr. Ericson was known to hold the Woman's Right movement in contempt; but he had been twice to hear Miss Barton preach, when there were no services in his own church, and he had also called on her several times, and when the deacons conferred with him about preaching that sermon they found it impossible to obtain any satisfaction; he was very polite, and he did not say that he would not, but, "he, smiling, put the question by."

One day he surprised Miss Barton by inviting her to an exchange of pulpits for the following Sunday; but that was in harvest time, and she had come to Scragg End in June. Even Ponkapawket had become accustomed to the idea of a woman preacher, if it did not approve it.

He had found her sitting on the piazza on a warm afternoon in late September. She had a large basketful of stockings beside her, and was darning them diligently. Some were her own, some were Adoniram Hewitt's and Lysander's, for Roxy had gone away on a visit, and Mrs. Hewitt's hands were more than full. She looked as housewifly as if she had never aimed at any wider sphere. The shadow of a smile flickered about Mr. Ericson's mouth as he observed her employment. Although Miss Barton looked up only as much as politeness required, she saw the smile, and it brought a flush to her cheek. Though she looked so strong and resolute, it was evident that Miss Barton was keenly sensitive. He sat down beside her and immediately proffered his request, perhaps as an antidote to the smile.

"Your people would be shocked. They don't approve of me," said Miss Barton. "And I shouldn't have the courage."

"I never suspected you of any want of courage," said Mr. Ericson.

"I am a dreadful coward. I don't think I fully realized it when I began. If I had been sent anywhere but to Scragg End, I don't know what I should have done. Here they are all humble-minded people, without strong prejudices, and I do seem to have found the way to their hearts. But I am afraid I should never dare to enter another pulpit—certainly not yours at Ponkapawket."

"You would soon conquer there as you have conqured here," said Mr. Ericson.

"I couldn't endure that unfriendly gaze. I should display all my womanishness. I should blush, I should tremble, I might faint. I should be a stumbling block to the women who are following in the same pathway. I don't mean to be that. My work in Scragg End suffices, and I am so thankful for it."

"I am sorry you feel so about Ponkapawket, because I have a proposition in my mind much more audacious than the one that I made," said Mr. Ericson.

Miss Barton raised her eyes inquiringly, and dropped them again instantly under the minister's gaze.

"I thought we might unite the churches," Mr. Ericson's voice trembled a little, as if he were afraid.

I don't see how it could be done," said Miss Barton frigidly.

"Of course there is but one way," said Mr. Ericson, quietly. "I dared not ask you to be my wife without suggesting to you the fact that your work need not be given up."

The girl rose to her feet. Lysander's stocking fell from her hand and was blown away by the wind unheeded. "I don't know what I have done to deserve this—this insult. I thought that at least you respected me, and I thought my calling made me sacred from such—such attacks altogether.

"I am sorry that you should think it an insult. I can hardly see how a man could give you a better proof of his respect than to ask you to become his wife. And as for your calling making you sacred, we don't believe in the celibacy of the clergy, you know." In spite of this evident mortification and distress, there was a sly twinkle in Mr. Ericson's eye as he said that.

"But I—I am a woman," said Miss Barton, sitting down again and covering her face with her hands.

"The more reason why you should be married," said Mr. Ericson, calmly. you need a protector."

"I am perfectly sufficient for myself. And I shall never care for anybody—anybody—but my work."

Mr. Ericson arose. "I am sorry to have troubled you," he said, gently. "I love you, and I have never known what it was to love a woman before; that is all my excuse."

Miss Barton watched him as he went down the road, with the yellow leaves falling upon him. She observed as she had never done before, how finely his head was set upon his broad shoulders, what a manly grace there was about his strong, well-knit figure.

"But he has no business to love me," she said, drawing her brows into a tight frown.

Then suddenly she remembered Lysander's stocking, and went down in the grass to look for it. It had blown over the fence into the field. She stretched her arms between the slats and drew it back. As she did so she caught sight of Lysander. He was gathering squashes and pumpkins on the little south hill; she saw his figure in silhoutte against the sky. He started to come toward the house, and she waited for him—waited until a sudden thought sent a flame of color over her face.

"It can't be—" she said, half aloud, inquiringly. "I will keep that out of my life. I won't be a failure! I won't be!" And she rushed up to her room and locked herself in.

She came down as grave as ever when the tea bell rang, and after the tea she and Lysander read their daily quantity of Greek, for Lysander was pursuing his studies with renewed avidity since he had a companion to help him, and had not yet given up his long cherished hope of studying for the ministry, though there seemed no prospect of his being able to leave the farm.

After that day Miss Barton devoted herself more zealously than ever to her work. She darned no more stockings When she was not writing her sermons, she was visiting the sick and the poor, and making or suggesting and inducing others to make improvements, sanitary and moral, as well as religious.

"She was as practical and efficient as if she was not a woman," many people said; and old Jeremy Grimes, who had wished to tell her when she came that they didn't want a woman preacher, said, "they couldn't have had such women in St. Paul's time, or he would never have written what he did."

But Mrs. Hewitt had a grievance. Mrs. Barton didn't seem to make herself one of the family as she used to. She was shut up in her own room almost all the time now, and she and Lysander didn't seem to get along as they used to. She never came into the kitchen and wanted to help make cake now, or sat with them around the fire in the evening while Lysander read aloud. She didn't seem to have anything against them, but she wasn't free and sociable any more."

Lysander was teaching school this winter and attending to the farm work in his leisure time. His habit of studying with Miss Barton had gradually died out. To his mother's persistent questionings Lysander replied that neither of them had any time for it now.

Mrs. Hewitt could not make it out. "Pa," who prided himself upon being long-headed, hinted that he could, but he would not say outright what he thought, and his wife regarded his hints with lofty scorn.

One afternoon, after school hours, Lysander went down to the woods back of the house to superintend the operations of some men who were cutting timber. Just at dusk Miss Barton, coming home from a visit to a sick parishoner, encountered four men carrying on an improvised stretcher Lysander's apparently lifeless body. He was lying white and rigid, and there were scarlet spots upon the snow all the way that he had come. Down on her knees in the snow fell Miss Barton and threw her arms around him.

"Oh, my love! my love! have you gone so far away that you cannot hear me say I do love you?" she cried. "I was cold and hard because I thought it was my duty, but if you only could come back—"

And then they had to raise Miss Barton and carry her into the house, for she had fainted.

"That's just what I could have told you a good while ago if I had a mind to," said "Pa," as he rehearsed the scene to his wife an hour afterward. "She's a terrible site like a woman if she is a minister. And Lysander—well, I calculate he won't complain of having his foot cut, if it does lay him up for a while. I can't say whether she'll let him do the preaching or whether they'll both do it, but you'll see them both married before summer."

"I don't want anybody to think it's because I'm a woman," said Miss Barton, rather inconsequently, when Lysander lead her, blushing and tearful to his mother's arms. "But I didn't seem able to help it. And Lysander said I needn't give up my work."

He Shoved Off.

The other day a young man, about 20 years of age, accompanied by a girl two or three years younger, reached the city by a Bay City train, and after looking around for a few hours returned to the depot and bought some sandwiches for lunch. The fellow was heard bragging a good deal as to what he had done and could do and cities he had visited, and by-and-by he walked up to the depot policeman and handed him four five cent cigars and said:

"That's my girl in there."

"Yes."

"She just thinks her eyes of me."

"So?"

"I've never had a chance to show her how I'd die for her if necessary, and it seems to me we might put up a little job right here."

"How?"

"Well, suppose me and her walk out to see the river. I leave her for a moment. Some chap comes along and begins to chin her. I rush back and knocked him into the middle of next week. She'd want to marry me within a week. Girls of her age just dote on heroes, you know."

"Yes, they do."

"Well, you help me. You pick out some chap around here and tell him what I'm up to, and I won't mind standing treat for all hands. When I rush on him he'd better run.

Five minutes later the girl stood on the wharf alone. A fellow big enough to pitch a barrel of flour over a freight car approached in a careless way and observed:

"Fine day, mis."

"Yes, sir."

"Nice view of the Canada shore."

"Yes, indeed."

"May I offer you some peppermint loz——."

Just then the young man came rushing down. When he came within ten feet of the pair he cried out:

"Villain! take your leave, or I'll toss you into the river."

"Oh, I guess not," carelessly replied the other.

"Base scoundrel! I am here to rescue this young girl from your clutches."

"Don't bust any buttons off, my young cub!"

"The young man made a dash. He had to, or wilt. He rushed at the big chap with his arm upraised and heroism in his eye, and the next minute he was picked up and tossed over among a lot of green hides as carefully as if he had been glass. Then the big man raised his cap to the girl, smiled sweetly as he bowed and scraped his foot, and he was out of sight before the young man recovered sufficiently to call out:

"Minnie, did I kill him?"

"No, Henry."

"Thank Heaven that I am not guilty of murder! Let him beware, however. Another time I may not be able to restrain myself."

Oyster Propogation.

Prof. Ryder, of the United States Fish Commission, is very hopeful that this season's experiments will prove the feasibility of oyster propagation and cultivation by artificial means. He proposes to continue the work this year at some place in or near Chesapeake Bay. The deterioration of the natural oyster beds of that bay and the adjacent waters awakened the solicitude of the Maryland legislature, and has created a commission to inquire into the condition of the oyster beds, and report to the next General Assembly, with a view to legislation for the protection and increase of the oysters in Maryland waters. Prof. W. K. Brooks, of Johns Hopkins University, is president of the commission. In conversation recently Prof. Brooks said: "I discovered five years ago that it is possible to hatch oysters in unlimited numbers from eggs, and to keep them alive for a few days and for some time after they have developed their shells. If these young oysters could be reared until they are large enough to handle and plant, the supply of oysters would be increased indefinitely. There would be none of the uncertainty which attends fish-hatching, for the young oysters would stay where they are put and would be as tangible as potatoes. The great importance of the subject has led many naturalists to experiment within the last five years, but they have not advanced beyond the point where I left the subject."—N. Y. Tribune.

The Aim of Exercise.

It should be understood of the public, as is known to the profession, that the aim of exercise is not solely to work the organism which is thrown into activity, though that is one, and a very important, part of the object in view, because as the living body works it feeds, and as it feeds it is replenished, but there is another purpose in exercise, and that is to call into action and stimulate the faculty of recuperation. Those who believe in the existence of a special system, or series, of tropic nerves will not object to this designation of the recuperative function as a separate "faculty," and those who believe nutrition to be effected in and by the ordinary innervation will recognize the sense in which we employ the term in italics. It is through defect or deficiency in the vigor of this faculty that unaccustomed feats of strength

BLOOMSBURG, PA.

FRIDAY, JUNE 22, 1883.

Dr. McCosh has tendered his resignation as President of Princeton College.

The report that Queen Victoria contemplates abdicating the throne is denied in England.

Charles Emory Smith, of the Philadelphia Press, and ex-Governor Hoyt are talked of for chairman of the Republican State Committee.

The last chance of Phipps, the ex-superintendent of the Philadelphia Alms house, is gone. Judge Allison having overruled his motion for a new trial. He will be sentenced on the 30th inst.

George W. Atherton, will be inaugurated as President of the Pennsylvania State College at Bellefonte, on Thursday June 28th. At the same time will be exercises of the graduating class of 1883

It would seem no more than right to permit the sheriff and his family to abandon the county jail. They are about the only people who have to stay there. The prisoners walk out whenever they feel like it.

One of the Star Route defendants bought a whole saloon in Washington immediately after his acquittal and opened a free bar. He did this to show the world how grateful he was to the jury that pronounced him an innocent lamb.

There is a fine opportunity now for the Democratic House to make a record for itself by refusing to accept pay for the vacation. The adjournment was made because members wanted an opportunity to attend to their private affairs which had been neglected, and the state ought not to pay for time thus spent.

One of the Star Route jurors had an attack of delirium tremens when the jury was locked up after the Judge's charge, and the liquor was stopped. It took nearly a quart of whiskey to put him in proper condition to assist in rendering the infamous verdict. We are not informed how much the other eleven got.

A terrible calamity has befallen the town of Sunderland, England. At an entertainment given in a large hall, which was attended by several thousand children, one little one fell at the bottom of the steps as the crowd was coming out, others fell over it, and a panic occurred. One hundred and seventy-eight children were trampled to death. The scene was heart rending when the parents of the dead identified their offspring.

The most terrific storm for years, visited Harrisburg, on Friday evening. Water flowed on Market street from curb to curb. The sewers were choked up, and in consequence many cellars were flooded. The damage in the city alone will reach about $20,000, besides great damage to many private residences. At the same time the storm visited Muney, along the West Branch Susquehanna, and played havoc with trees, fences and buildings.

Dorsey is very bitter in his denunciation of republican politicians who he claims were benefitted by the mail contracts in which his brother and his friends were interested. He is especially severe on Senator John A Logan. Dorsey's intimate relations with the republican leaders have enabled him to become the possessor of secrets which he could use with terrible effect if he chose. He is not at all disinclined to explode his magazine if he concludes that it will blow up certain ambitious men in his party

The channel tunnel project has been treated to new figures. It can be built in 10 years, 30 miles from England to France, for $40,000,000, with an arrangement, costing $50,000, by which the danger of a French army's oozing up on English soil and slaying the British lion can be averted. It would accommodate two railroad tracks, and the patronage would need to be 2,000 passengers a day at $1.50 each, and 548 tons of merchandise to insure $2,190,000 a year, which would pay 5 per cent., after allowing 40 per cent, of gross earnings for running expenses.

"On the side of the Democrats," the Philadelphia Record observes: "The evidences of harmony and good feeling are gratifying. Governor Pattison's administration has not only the hearty approbation of the Democrats but it has earned in a great degree the esteem and good will of the Republicans. The substantial reforms which Governor Pattison has accomplished in redemption of his pledges are an indication of what might be done with a Legislature fully in accord with the purposes of his administration. In the presence of this active and vigilant state government the cry of Cassidyism has died harmlessly on the air.

One of the reform measures that passed the Legislature at the late session was the following act relating to political assessments:

"Be it enacted, etc.; that it shall be unlawful for any committee or member thereof, directly or indirectly, to demand of any public officer, subordinate or employe, holding any position of honor, trust or profit in this Commonwealth, or otherwise engaged or employed in the service of the State, or from any officer, subordinate or employe in any way engaged or employed in the service of any city of this State, any assessment, contribution, or precentage of any money, property, or other equivalent in anything of value with the understanding, either expressed or implied, that the same may or shall be used for any political purpose whatever. Any person or persons violating any of the foregoing provisions shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and on conviction sentenced to pay a fine not to exceed $100."

The Credentials of a Legislator.

From the Wilkesbarre Leader.

It is no child's play to be a faithful legislator, and there is not one in a hundred even of our men of more than average intelligence, who possesses the necessary qualifications. Every capable and faithful legislator earns his ten dollars to the penny, and the people have no right to complain, so long as it is themselves who send the others.

THE DUKES TRAGEDY.

The burden of public opinion seems to be in favor of the acquittal of James Nutt. His trial will take place at Uniontown in September, and able counsel have been employed to defend him. What the result will be is hard to conjecture. The killing of Dukes has all the elements of murder in the first degree. There was premeditation, and no immediate provocation, and the verdict must be either in the first degree, or acquittal. In remaining in the community where he had brought desolation upon the Nutt family, Dukes openly invited violence at the hands of young Nutt, and it is said that his conduct, when he met the son of the man he murdered was of a very irritating character. Dukes had no right to take the life of Capt. Nutt; James Nutt had no right to take the life of Dukes. Each in the eye of the law is guilty of murder, and yet a Fayette county jury acquitted Dukes. The law may hang young Nutt, but under the peculiar circumstances of the case public opinion will acquit him.

THE STAR ROUTERS ACQUITTED.

After a trial lasting about six months the Star Route thieves have been acquitted. Such a result is a disgrace to the nation. The guilt of the accused parties was clearly established, but an analysis of the jury gave little hope for a conviction, as the general opinion seemed to be that the trial would result in a disagreement. Although Dorsey has threatened to institute legal proceedings against newspapers that have denounced him, the leading dailies stand in no fear of him. The Philadelphia Times says:

It would be idle to attempt to treat the verdict of acquittal in the case as entitled to any measure of respect, and the grave reproach it puts upon the government demands that the public press shall call things by their right names. Brady, Dorsey and other fellow conspirators in the Star Route robberies are public thieves. The public know them to be such; they will be pointed out by the hissing scorn of the nation as self-convicted thieves wherever they may go, and the world will be too small to enable them to find a resting-place where they can meet with forgetfulness of their crimes. They corrupt the very fountain of the power of the government. Their infamy dates from the Senate, the first legislative tribunal of the land, and from the Cabinet, the constitutional council of the President. They made perjury and theft twin servants to give them fortune by the most infamous prostitution of political power, and they fitly rounded out such a career of crime by the pollution of the very sanctuary of justice.

The country ceased to hope for justice in the late trial, when the character of the jury was analyzed; but it was not expected that even Star Route defiance of law and public sentiment would extort an acquittal. The admonition of the first jury in the case, with its members who defeated a conviction, trembling in the criminal dock at the possible consequences of their disregard of sworn duty, was believed to be protection against such a flagrant miscarriage of justice. But there has not merely been a miscarriage of justice; there has been a total, a revolutionary overthrow of justice, in the only place where it is presumed that law is supreme and justice inviolate. With one juror exhibiting as a drunken maniac in court, just when the gravest duty was to be performed, and with ignorance and necessity fitting the jurors, as a body, for easy prey to the desperate tempter, it is not surprising, after all, that a verdict of acquittal has been demanded by the contracting parties, instead of the equally effective shield from punishment of a disagreeing jury. The public thieves who have shamed the nation by the most gigantic robbery and studied perjury, have been as brave and desperate in corrupting the channels of justice as they were brave and desperate in public theft; and they will go forth with an acquittal, that fifty millions of their countrymen will declare a lie and a consuming reproach to the Republic.

Democratic State Convention.

The Democratic State Convention will meet in the opera house, Harrisburg, on Wednesday, Aug. 1, at 10 a. m., to nominate a candidate for Auditor-General and a candidate for State Treasurer, and to transact such other business as the convention may determine.

There will also be presented to the convention a resolution which has been adopted by the State Committee, changing the rules of the party so as to fix the time of the annual meeting of the State Committee at 4 p. m., on the Wednesday after the third Monday of January, instead of the third Monday as now provided.

Under the new rules of the party the the representation in the State Convention will be by representative delegates from existing representative districts, one for each 1,000 Democratic votes cast at the gubernatorial election, or for a fraction of 1,000 such votes amounting to 500 or more; Provided that each representative district shall have at least one delegate.

There will be a meeting of the Democratic State Committee in Harrisburg on Tuesday July 31, at 8 p. m.

The American Navy for Sale.

"If proof were needed of the awful wanton waste of money in the Navy Department during the past eighteen years, it would be supplied by the figures which indicate the age and cost of the vessels offered for sale at auction because they have rotted down and become worse than worthless

Thirty vessels are to be sold. Of these eleven have been built since the last year of the war, at a cost for construction and repair of $9,957,255, exclusively of the cost of equipment. Very few of these vessels have seen service of any value and none of them are so young as to belong to the Robesonian period, so fatal to ships and honesty. They were built at a time when the war was behind us and when there was not the slightest prospect that we should have any use for a navy. The contractors were the only persons benefited by this reckless expenditure.

We have trained no sailors on these vessels. Our naval officers have been compelled to remain in quiet and ignorance, without even the slightest knowledge of their profession. Failures as they are, these old hulks have brought disgrace upon naval management and demoralization to public virtue. Surely it is fitting that with such a record of sin behind them they should go to the junk shops."

As the Democratic State Convention meets before our county convention, the county standing committee will have the appointment of delegates to the state convention. Under the new rules we are entitled to four.

Dan Rice Discharged.

Dan Rice, who has been traveling with Nathan & Co's circus, was discharged last Saturday. The Batavia News of Saturday says: "The plain truth is the 'Colonel' has allowed liquor to get the mastery over him again, and he has been indulging in the bowl so freely for the past few weeks that no confidence could be placed in him, and the managers of the show were at no time sure he would be able to live up to his contract to appear at each performance. Although drinking heavily, he has been able to go through his part of the performance tolerably well, but appeals and threats were ineffectual in inducing him to sober up and keep sober. After yesterday afternoon's performance it is said Mr. Nathan told Dan that he should not want his services any longer. The veteran clown and his daughter, a young woman about twenty five years of age, who joined him a few days ago at Buffalo left on the 6:05 train for the West, bound for Girard, Pa., the Colonel's home, where he has a handsome residence. The unfortunate habit to which Colonel Rice is addicted is responsible for many of the vicissitudes that have beset his path during his long and eventful career as a showman. He has reformed several times, and last winter delivered temperance lectures at the "Big Indian Wigwam" in New York, in conjunction with Thomas N. Doutney, a temperance orator who is not unknown in Batavia."

The Extra Session.

Pursuant to adjournment both branches of the Legislature met on Tuesday evening.

Landis, of Lancaster, in the house presented a senatorial apportionment bill, giving 27 republicans, 17 democrats and 6 doubtful. Mr. Eccles, of Cumberland, introduced two bills—the congressional forming a delegation of 14 republicans, 10 democrats and 4 doubtful; the senatorial, 28 republicans, 20 democrats and 2 doubtful. Mr. Devinney, of York, presented a congressional apportionment, giving a delegation of 15 republicans to 13 democrats.

In the Senate, Vandegrift introduced a resolution that the clerks of the senate in computing the time for pay for the extra session make no account of the days between June 8th and 9th.

In an instant Field Marshal Cooper considerably nettled because the democrats had so superbly headed him off, amended by offering a substitute that any and all per diem pay be omitted for members of the senate and house between June 8th and 19th. The Senator from Bucks accepted the amendment. It covered what he was after and the senate unanimously adopted the resolution as amended.

Senator Ross thought it an early day to begin buncombe resolutions and wanted the whole matter postponed to the end of the session when it would come in with some propriety.

Cooper said no one would accuse him of offering buncombe resolutions as it was something he had always avoided. As the recess was for the private convenience of the members he thought that they should not ask for pay. Following up this deliverance he defined his style of reform as different from the other side in that it had a lower case r and the other was a capital R.

Senator Laird referred to the constitutional clause which says compensation shall only be allowed for attendance at a session.

Senator Gordon was pleased to note that the senator from Delaware had for the first time in the year spoken profitably if not eloquently for the good of the commonwealth.

The republican senators did not vote.

TOO MUCH FOR THE COMMITTEES.

Senator Reyburn introduced a resolution that the president pro tem. should be put on all the appropriation committees. This Senator Gordon opposed. He denominated the thing as "a distribution of honors and utility." He thought it well to consider the arithmetic of the subject as it was an extraordinary exhibition of the grace of the senate.

The senate adopted the resolution and then fixed the daily sessions from 11 a. m. to 1 p. m.

Guiteau's Last Curse.

A writer in the Washington Post finds in the fact that Mr. Sheahan, one of the Guiteau jurors, has been sent to the insane asylum a proof that the baleful prophecy of Guiteau that every one who had anything to do with his trial or conviction would be followed by a curse. The writer points to the following incidents in confirmation of his theory: "The death of District Attorney Corkhill's wife was the first event which could be called a fulfilment of Guiteau's prophecy. Juror Hobb's wife died; Surgeon General Barnes, an important witness, died; Judge Porter's health is said to be wrecked; Marshal Henry, Bailiff Stahl, Detective McElfresh, Jail-wagon Guard Perry Carson, and the driver, James Leonard were dismissed from service; Dr. Noble Young, an important expert witness, died, Rev. Dr. Hicks has been libelled; Dr. Gray, another expert, was shot at in a Utica asylum; Doctor McDonald has been or is the object of investigation in connection with his administration of Ward's Island New York,; Officer Pat Kearney's removal from the Baltimore and Potomac depot was only a temporary misfortune, though at one time included among the fulfillments of Guiteau's curse. Poor Mike Sheehan was well known and well liked by every one who knew him."

Brady in Court.

HE IS REQUIRED TO GIVE TWO NEW BAIL BONDS.

WASHINGTON, June 19.—General Brady came into the criminal court this morning for the purpose of furnishing bail for his appearance to answer the charges contained in the two indictments charging him with receiving money while second assistant postmaster general as a consideration for increasing certain Star route mail service. Judge Wylie said that the verdict in the trial just ended would probably be a sufficient reason for vacating the bond given by General Brady in that case. The original indictment remained, but as he understood that it was nearly identical with that recently disposed of he thought that it should be abandoned. Mr. Ker said that the government did not purpose trying that indictment, and if the court thought that it should be dismissed he would not object. As Mr. Merrick was not present, however, he asked that any action in that matter be postponed until Saturday next. The subject was then dropped, and after some discussion the court fixed the bail in two additional indictments at $1,000 in each case. General Brady will give the required bail on Saturday.

The Indian Problem.

Secretary Teller proposes to deal with the Indian problem in a sensible, business sort of a way that promises much benefit to the future of the aboriginals of America, if only the Department will continue to carry on the same policy. The Secretary visited the Carlisle school a short time ago and expressed a warm approval of the way in which Indian children are there being educated, both in letters and mechanical arts, and declared that in his opinion the only way to save the Indian was to make him self-supporting and consequently independent. He follows up this excellent idea by announcing that he will use his influence and all the money he can command to make the Indians stock raisers, converting their reservations into grazing lands and allowing them their own flocks and herds by which they can make an honest living, and as they grow into the habit of saving up for a rainy day they may become as independent and wealthy as any of the white people engaged in a similar calling.

There is much to commend in this policy. It will give the Indians something to do which is, as nearly as may be in accordance with their wild notions and modes of living. It will give them plenty of exercise, with no work that an Indian will specially regard as degrading to him. It will tend to keep them quiet by keeping the mind and body employed, leaving little time to brood over their past glories or fancied wrongs done to their race by the dominant white man. It will educate them in that underlying principle upon which the whole structure of civilized society is built; the principle of meum et tuum, without which anarchy must soon prevail. It will teach them to rely on their own resources, and not to depend upon the charity of the State doled out to them through thieving agents or rascally contractors, whose example as a rule are not calculated to inspire in the mind of an Indian any very elevated idea of whitemen's honesty and truthfulness and will in time relieve Congress from the annual wrangle over the Indian appropriation bill. One serious difficulty, however, to the perfect success of this plan will be to prevent the cowboys and frontiersmen from stealing the Indian's stock, or defrauding them out of their property by pretended purchases. Otherwise we see no reason why this plan should not forever put an end to the now almost continuous petty warfare in the Indian country.—Wilkesbarre Record.

Crazed by Fear.

WHAT THE SUPPOSED VISIT OF AN APPARITION HAS CAUSED.

SNYDERTOWN, Pa., June 19.—The most curious cases of insanity ever heard of in this region are reported from Brush Valley, some distance from here. About five years ago a man named Moore was killed in the mines near here. He left a widow and son of eleven years of age. They moved into a farming region and by dint of hard work managed to exist. Both mother and son were practical, sensible people, quiet but sociable.

Last night, about twelve o'clock, Mrs. Moore was awakened by hearing a terrible outery in the room adjoining hers, occupied by the son, now a boy of sixteen years. In haste she ran to the room and found the boy almost paralyzed with fear, standing by the open window with beads of prespiration on his brow. With difficulty she calmed him, and questioned him as to the cause of his trepidation. Still quaking terribly, he told that he had been awakened by some one opening the window, and, turning, saw the figure of a man peering in. Horrified he gazed at it, unable to move, and after a few moments discovered in the intruder the face of his dead father. Then he gave utterance to a shriek which had so staatled his mother.

THE MOTHER'S TERRIBLE FRIGHT.

After he had finished his tale the mother turned toward the window and saw something which caused her to lose her mind, and, with a wild yell, she sprang through the window and fell to the ground below, injuring herself fatally.

The shrieks of the boy brought a few neighbors to the scene, and they carried the injured woman into the house. From the son these facts were learned. When the woman recovered consciousness she gazed about her for an instant, and then, as her eyes fell upon her son, sho went into a violent fit of laughter, and laid one hand upon his shoulder. Instantly the young man became seized with the laughing fit, and in a few minutes sank exhausted to the floor.

In a short time the laughing fit passed away, and it was followed by violent symptoms of insanity. He barked like a dog and frothed at the mouth, and the neighbors were in despair as to what course to pursue. It was some miles to the nearest village where a physician could be found. One of the number hastily saddled a horse and set off in search of a doctor. Three men and two women remainded in the house.

The lad in the meanwhile had been laid upon a bed, and Henry Herrick, a young farmer, mounted guard over him. About 2 o'clock Moore was again seized with violent spasms, and Herrick, in trying to quiet him, took hold of his hand. No sooner had he done so than he was attacked with spasms and fell to the floor, and showed all the symptoms that Moore had manifested. Horrified and appalled the four other watchers fled from the room and left the three maniacs alone.

NO HOPE OF RECOVERY

One of the women went home and soon returned with her father, Josiah Bellheimer, a stout, gray-haired, old man, who had been an attendant in an old hospital during the war. Mr Bellheimer entered the room, and seizing young Moore, bound him to the bed. He then secured Mrs. Moore and the young farmer, Herolck. An hour later a physician arrived and conveyed Herrick to his home. Another physician arrived soon after and attended to Mrs Moore and her son.

He said this morning that but little hope could be entertained of Mrs. Moore's recovery. He also states that the woman and her son have broken down their systems by hard work. It seems insanity is hereditary in the case of Herrick, having manifested itself in many of the family in the past. This morning young Moore was unusually violent, and arrangements are being made to convey him to an asylum. The entire farming region is agog over the matter, as all the parties are well knwn,

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN

Hair Renewer.

Seldom does a popular remedy win such a strong hold upon the public confidence as has HALL'S HAIR RENEWER. The cases in which it has accomplished a complete restoration of color to the hair, and vigorous health to the scalp, are innumerable.

Old people like it for its wonderful power to restore to their whitening locks their original color and beauty. Middle-aged people like it because it prevents them from getting bald, keeps dandruff away, and makes the hair grow thick and strong. Young ladies like it as a dressing because it gives the hair a beautiful glossy lustre, and enables them to dress it in whatever form they wish. Thus it is the favorite of all, and it has become so simply because it disappoints no one.

DROWNED IN BEER.

Concerning this popular beverage two men express their minds.

"The fact is sir, and you may stick a pin there, that the people of this country are likely to be drowned in a flood of lager beer," shouted an enthusiastic fested other the other day into the ear of your cornered correspondent. The German drink has struck us hard. It is the second deluge."

"Yes, and the worst of this beer drinking business is that it gets up kidney troubles, as a heavy wind raises the waves," added a city physician, who had a knowledge of the times and a tendency to metaphor. "The midnight 'schooner' leaves behind it a wake of furred tongues, headaches, torpid livers, nausea, and all that, and lays the foundation of Bright's Disease."

This melancholy fact accounts in part for the increasing sales of BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER, which at once mitigates these symptoms. Price 25 cents. Ask your physician about it. Seabury & Johnson, Chemists, New York. June 15-4w d

The Wonderful Efficacy of

Has been so frequently and satisfactorily proven that it seems almost superfluous to say anything more in their favor. The lameness and constantly increasing demand for them, both in this and foreign countries, is the best evidence of their value. Their sale to-day in the United States is far greater than any other cathartic medicine. This demand is not spasmodic, it is regular and steady. It is not of to-day or yesterday, it is an increase that has been steadily growing for the last thirty-five years. What are the reasons for this great and growing demand?

Dr. Schenck's Mandrake Pills contain no mercury, and yet they act with wonderful effect upon the liver. They cleanse the stomach and bowels of all irritating matter, which, if allowed to remain, poison the blood, and hence on Malaria, Chills and Fever, and many other diseases. They give health and strength to the digestive organs. They create appetite and give vigor to the whole system. They are in fact the medicine of all others which should be taken in times like the present, when malarial and other epidemics are raging, as they prepare the system to resist attacks of disease of every character.

Dr. Schenck's Mandrake Pills are sold by all druggists at 25cts. per box, or sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price.

Dr. Schenck's Book on Consumption, Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia, in English or German, is sent free to all. Address Dr. J. H. SCHENCK & SON, Philadelphia, Pa. June 1-4w d

The Philadelphia Times of Saturday printed three columns of special dispatches from every part of the state showing the condition of the crops. The general tenor of these dispatches was that the grass, wheat and potato crops would be heavy, while the corn crop might suffer some from the backward spring and cool weather. On the whole, however, the promise of a bountiful harvest is excellent and the farmers of the State are in better spirits than they have been for a long time.

The Town authorities have given notice that they will enforce the law forbidding the shooting of fireworks on the 4th of July, within the Town limits. The following is the ordinance on the subject:

There are some bad young boys in this town who are paving the way for a career of crime, unless they are soon checked. On Sunday last while the family was at church, four of these boys got into the house of Dennis McDonald on East street, and stole four dollars from a pocket book of Mrs. McDonald. They went all through the house. There have been other petty thefts in the same neighborhood, recently. Mr. McDonald knows the boys who were in his house, and has not yet decided whether to have them arrested or not. If their parents would give them a sound flogging it might be sufficient to check them.

S. Bruce Coleman writes thus to his paper, the News-Dealer, of our town:

BLOOMSBURG.

Everything was quiet here. The iron works are not running their full capacity and the miners, generally, are idle. The cause, as stated, is that they can purchase iron elsewhere at $15 and $16 a ton and costs them $18 to make it there. This place is considerably larger than Berwick, is the county seat of Columbia county, and is really the handsomest town on the river. Extensive improvements have been made during the past few years. The News Dealer has hosts of friends here also, and its readers are constantly growing in numbers. While there arrangements were made to supply the residents of Light Street, Orangeville, Benton, Millville and Buckhorn with the paper every Sunday morning. A call at the COLUMBIAN office found Messrs. Elwell & Bittenbender busily engaged. They are very pleasantly located and have one of the finest and most convenient offices in the State. They are deserving of the success they have attained, which is due materially to the excellent journal furnished to their subscribers. Among the energetic business men are the Buckalew Brothers, proprietors of one of the best livery stables in that region. A good rig can be secured at any time, or if preferred to be taken into the country, it will be done, at the same time a lonesome journey need not be feared, especially if favored with the company of one of the proprietors.

ULYSSES, Neb., June 13th, 1883.

EDITORS COLUMBIAN:—

I left York county Friday, May 25th; arrived at Mr. J. C. Coleman's in Butler county, Neb., 4:15 p. m. Mr. Coleman is a son-in-law of M. A. Ammerman, Esq., of Fishingcreek, Columbia county. He came here February 27th, 1877, and bought 160 acres of raw prairie land, six miles west of Ulysses, a thriving village. A branch of the B. & M. R. R. runs through this place. The population is about 700 at the present time. It contains a Methodist Episcopal church and one Catholic, and a Congregational church is about to be erected. There are seven or eight dry goods stores in the place, hardware and grocery stores in abundance, two large grain elevators, one grist mill, furniture stores, &c. The town is near the big Blue river, surrounded by some of the best farms in the United States. The lands along the rivers are somewhat broken with deep draws, but the table lands are more level, mostly good farm land, some places rather low so that the water stands on it in a wet season. The grass that grows in these places is not of much account. The farmers in Nebraska are still planting large groves of cottonwood, elder and black willow. These are for "wind breaks." Some plant the cottonwood at regular intervals for miles along the roads, and as soon as large enough fasten the barb wire to them for fence. The hedge fence will play out before many years in this country. The people of this neighborhood are from Pennsylvania, Iowa, Wisconsin and Illinois. They are good, industrious and intelligent citizens.

The small grain—such as wheat, rye, oats and barley—looks promising, but the corn look hard and is very backward on account of the cold wet weather. Some farmers have planted their corn three times in this State, so you see the weeds and grass have got the start of the corn and will make it hard work for the farmers to get them subdued. They are very busy now cultivating. You can look in any direction and see them busily engaged on their farms—some riding and some walking behind the cultivator. The farmers have on hand quite a quantity of old corn lying in heaps around on their farms without any covering. It looks very bright and nice. The elevators at every village have their cribs full. John B. Laycock, at York City, told me there were eight hundred thousand bushels of corn in the cribs at that place.

Prices of grain, &c., are as follows: wheat 75 cts., rye 50, corn 35, oats 45. Corn will run up to 55 or 60 cents. Eggs 12 cts. per doz., dry goods and groceries about the same as your place. Mr. Olly. Hughes of this place, formerly of Cambra, Luzerne county, Pa., visited Kansas. He and Sanderson Weaver purpose going West soon. They expect to homestead, if suited with the place, somewhere along the Republican. ELI ROBBINS.

Fatal Accident.

On Friday afternoon, Charles, son of J. C. Snyder on East street, was shot in the side with a shot gun in his own hands, resulting in his death on Sunday morning. He had loaded the gun with one ball and about fifty bird shot for the purpose of shooting a cat, and in getting over a fence the gun was discharged, the load entering his right side, shattering several ribs, and passing on up near the right lung. Doctors Rutter and Ransom were summoned, but the unfortunate boy was beyond the aid of medical skill. Mrs. Snyder was in Philadelphia at the time, having gone down only a few days before on a visit. She came home on Saturday in time to see her boy alive. Charley was about 13 years of age. The funeral took place at the Lutheran church on Tuesday afternoon, and was largely attended, the Sunday school being present in a body. This is a sad affair and the parents have the sympathy of the community.

Centre Notes.

Mr. Samuel Kelchner, an aged and respected citizen died on Sunday morning last after an illness of several weeks. He leaves a widow and one son, Mr. Daniel Kelchner of Briar Creek township.

Mr. Charles A. Conner lost a valuable black horse on Friday of last week. This is discouraging for a young man just beginning in life.

Mr. Henry Delong, who has been sick all winter, fails to gain strength with the coming of summer as expected and is in a critical condition indeed.

Rev. Bodine, the Lutheran minister who has just located in the valley, has moved in the Erwine house where he expects to make his home. A cordial welcome is tendered him with the hope that he may find it pleasant here.

The Centre township local Sunday School Convention held at Hidlay Church proved a very pleasant and profitable occasion. All express the hope that the good work may be continued.

Misses Mary and Emma Hancock of Danville are the guests of Mrs. Arthur Creasy.

Miss Lizzie Snyder of Milton spent last week at Mr. Levi Aikman's.

Miss Josie Hutchison, who has been in the west for some time, has returned for a visit in the valley.

Miss Campbell of Danville spent last Sunday with Miss Sadie Hagenbuch.

Fishing parties are the rage just now but we will leave the fishers to tell their fish stories.

Notice to Contractors.

There will be a letting of the Christian Chapel, at Cambra, to the lowest and best bidder, on Saturday June 23rd, in the afternoon, at the store of James McHenry. The mason and plastering, carpenter work and painting will each be let separate, the contractor to furnish his own material except the stone for wall. The size will be 32x50 feet, and the style same as the M. E. church at Stillwater, Columbia county. For particulars see the undersigned building committee.

A. G. DAVISON,

Centre Township Sunday School Association.

The District Vice President of Centre township, J. H. Aikman, was the first to carry out the wishes of the county Sunday school Association, in issuing a call for a township convention. Workers from six of the eight schools in the township met on Tuesday morning and afternoon, June 12th, in Hidlay church. Four ministers of the five who preach in the township were in attendance, and one from Bloomsburg.

All persons connected with the schools of the township, who are in good standing and enough interested to come, were received as active members. Ministers and Sunday school workers from outside the township were welcomed as advisory members. A permanent organization was effected by electing the following officers: President, J. H. Aikman—Hidlay Union. A Vice President from each of the other schools as follows: St. Paul's Lutheran—Stephen Swank; Baptist—Thomas C. Kocher; Webb's Run Union—N. L. Campbell; Fowlersville M. E.—Wesley Kelchner; Lime Ridge M. E.—A. Frederick; Lime Ridge Evangelical—Peter Hottenstein; Ebenezer Evangelical—Levi Remly. Secretary—A. W. Spear. Treasurer—Geo. M. Whitmire. The officers of the association compose the Executive Committee.

Among other topics that of keeping the schools open all the year was discussed. It was found that five of the schools do not close, and hopes are entertained that two, if not the three, remaining ones will become evergreen.

A committee was appointed consisting of the officers and teachers of each school to ascertain and report at next convention the number of children in their district who do not attend Sunday school.

A Bible Class was conducted by Rev. Canfield, and a childrens' meeting opened by Rev. Houtz.

No decision was arrived at as to how often the meetings of the Association should be held, but it was decided to hold our next meeting in September—the date to be fixed by the President—in the M. E. church at Lime Ridge.

A. W. SPEAR, Secretary.

The Episcopal Convention.

The Episcopal convention met last week in Reading. The division of the diocese was again made an important subject of discussion and the friends of the movement hoped it would go through. But it failed, the vote standing 32 yeas and 33 nays.

Rev. Mr. Hayden, of Wilkesbarre, submitted a resolution that the portion of the bishop's address in regard to an assistant bishop be referred to a committee of four clergy and four laity, who shall report at the next convention.

Mr. Funck moved to amend by adding, "and that $1,500 be appropriated to pay for such Episcopal aid as the bishop in his judgment may require." This was accepted, and the resolution as amended carried by a vote of 58 ayes to 38 nays.

The bishop stated that the vote placed him in an unpleasant position, as he could not tell whether the division was on the latter or the first part of the resolution. Dr. Gilliatt then moved that the $1,500 be appropriated by a unanimous vote. Dr. Lamberton seconded the motion, and it was carried.

The report of the board of missions shows that 37 missions are established and that during the year services were held at 54 places. Six missionaries are at work. $8,900 were appropriated for missions, and $8,268.90 paid into the treasury. There are 30 non-contributing parishes, 10 of which, however, paid salaries directly to missionaries. $12,639.40 were contributed by parishes.

On motion it was resolved that the "changes proposed by the general convention of 1880 in the ratification of the Book of Common Prayer are unadvisable."

On motion of Rev. Mr. Platt, the following were elected supplemental deputies: Rev. Messrs. W. C. Langdon, M. A. Tolman, Dr. Hopkins, Chandler Hare, Messrs. M. Schall, C. M. Conyngham, J. W. Maynard and J. I. Blakslie.

Resolved, That an extra assessment for the year of thirty cents per capita be levied to meet the extra expenses incurred by the appropriation of $1,500 made for aid to the bishop and to cover deficiency now existing in Episcopal and convention funds.

This resolution was offered by Rev. Mr. Paine. Secretary Lamberton announced that he was authorized by a lady in the audience to make the statement that she would give $1,500 toward the proposed aid, provided means were adopted to extinguish the debt of the convention.

A resolution of thanks was tendered the lady, and by a rising vote the convention pledged itself to extinguish the debt resting upon it.

The committe to whom was referred the question of assessments reported the following:

"That a special levy of 20 cents per capita on the present enrollment be made at once to cover the present deficiency, and that payment of this be due on or before October 1st."

The resolution was amended so as to allow parishes the privilege of contributing toward paying the debt before the end of July. If the debt is not covered by contribution, then a special levy of 20 cents per capita be imposed, payable before October 1st. In this shape it was adopted.

The convention then adjourned to meet next year in Christ church, Reading.

The Normal School.

AS SEEN BY THE EDITOR OF THE Danville Intelligencer.

Editor Chalfant recently visited the Normal School, and we print a portion of an article published in his paper:

"While in Bloomsburg, a few days since, we visited the Normal School at that place, which is in the charge and under the direction of Prof. D. J. Waller. This school has experienced many vicissitudes of fortune. It has suffered much in the past from misdirected management, and, to cap the climax of its distresses, one of the main buildings was destroyed by fire. Although another and more capacious structure was erected in the place of the one that succumbed to this calamity, a long period of depression followed. So unhappy were its prospects that at one time the stockholders were inclined to dispose of it to parties who desired the buildings and grounds for an ecclesiastical seminary. But this transfer was averted until brighter days dawned, and instead of yielding to adversity it entered on a career of prosperity. For this favorable change much is due to Prof. Waller and his corps of assistants, who have been indefatigable in their efforts to place the institution on a higher educational and financial plane.

The buildings are three in number; the two main buildings are of brick, and the "annex" is of frame. One of the main buildings is devoted solely to educational purposes, and in this are situated the class and recitation rooms, the hall, etc., and through this large corridors intersect each other at right angles. The other is occupied by the "boarding" pupils. In the lower stories are the offices, parlors and dining rooms, and in the two upper stories are the dormitories. The rooms are light, airy and commodious, and from the windows the vista is beautiful. Each story is provided with outside fire escapes, by means of which the building can be emptied of pupils in a few minutes. The annex, a one-story frame, 28 feet wide by 40 feet in length, comprises what is termed "the primary department."

At the present time there are three hundred and fifteen students pursuing the regular course in the institution. Of these one hundred and twenty are "boarding" scholars. As the full boarding capacity of the school is one hundred and sixty, it can readily be seen that the school will soon be full.

The location of the school is admirable and delightful. It stands on the brow of the hill overlooking the town, and from it the eye can take in a large scope of the surrounding country. Beneath and in front Bloomsburg "lies sleeping," while on the right debouches the lower end of Fishingcreek valley. Distant twelve miles, in the dim perspective to the left, lies Mifflinville, nestled down in the valley of the Susquehanna. Down this valley the river of that name flows broad and majestic with the calm sweep of strength; placid, it reflects the streaming sunlight as a lengthening mirror, and like a belt of molten silver glides amid the golden fields or along the base of the blue-green hills, adorning the earth as the bright-hued ribbon of the damsel enhances her beauty, until it is lost amid the rolling hills three miles away, near the town of Catawissa. Around, the surrounding hills fringe the horizon and hem in the beautiful basin in the midst of which stands the Normal School. On the opposite side, the river is skirted by a long range of hills crowned with fine farms, beautiful in the varying hues of the growing grain, while beyond these, piercing the blue ether, Catawissa mountain rears its head aloft. Verily this is a lovely spot for a school of learning. Surroundings so attractive should exalt the mind, lead to earnest thoughtfulness, bear fruition in excellence."

Havoc at Muncy.

TERRIFIC VIOLENCE OF THE STORM SUNDAY EVENING.

READING DEPOT DESTROYED AND A BOY KILLED—DESTRUCTION AT OTHER POINTS.

A correspondent of the Williamsport Gazette & Bulletin gives the following account of the storm at Muncy on Sunday evening:

The storm approached Muncy from the north, dark and threatening clouds hung heavily down to the ground, moving with great rapidity. This was a few minutes before 5 o'clock. The wind blew a perfect gale; the rain poured down in torrents, and for a brief time hailstones as large as hickory nuts fell thick and fast. The storm lasted with great violence for nearly an hour, the course of the wind changing to east and ending up from the south. Hundreds of fruit and shade trees in Muncy were blown down, while everything in the shape of vegetation suffered greatly. Many windows all about the town suffered from the effects of the hailstones. Glade Run, which forms the eastern boundary of Muncy borough, was bank full in a very short time, washing away bridges and overflowing and filling the cellars of the residences in the northern part of the town. So far as heard from there is reported great damage to the crops all through the Muncy valley.

DEPOT DESTROYED AND A BOY KILLED.

A small cyclone, shaped like an inverted cone, struck the Philadelphia and Reading depot and a more complete wreck could not well be imagined. The roof was picked up and carried off as if it was that much paper, a portion of it lodging in a hickory tree a hundred yards away, and other portions scattered through the lumber yard of Noble & Peterman. About two-thirds of the building, of the southern end, was completely demolished, the brick walls being razed almost to the floor. A number of boys had sought refuge from the storm on the west side of the depot. When the roof was unshipped these boys started in the direction of the canal. Robert Dykins, a fifteen year old son of Squire Dykins, was caught and almost buried among the fallen debris. His legs were broken in a number of places, his body and head crushed and he expired a few minutes after without uttering a word. John Ritter and Sherman Hamilton, boys of about sixteen years of age, were both badly cut about the head and face. The wreck of the depot is almost complete, excepting that portion used as a ladies waiting room and the little office occupied by the agent and operator. The goods in the freight department were buried beneath the brick and mostly destroyed.

FORCE OF THE WIND.

The force of the wind may be judged from the fact that a number of piles of railroad ties were blown down, some of the ties being carried hundreds of feet. The railroad track near the depot was covered with ties and lumber. The lumber shed of Lewis S. Smith was upset. The brick yard of Jerome Shaw was badly damaged and the shed covering the kiln was completely wrecked. The storm seemed to have reached in the direction of Turbotville and no doubt later accounts will tell of great destruction in that direction. The Southern portion of the Keystone paint mill, near the Reading depot, was completely demolished and not a particle left standing and the smoke stack fell into the canal. The main building, containing the machinery, was not injured any. In the direction of Hughesville considerable damage was done to the fruit trees, and the large barn of Wilson Opp was partly unroofed. The storm had spent its fury before reaching Hughesville.

The national agricultural bureau average condition of the winter wheat, crop is 75 per cent. against 83 per cent. in May, and states without reference to the loss of area by plowing up. The Illinois agricultural bureau states that out of 2,900,000 acres seeded to winter wheat in that state, 878,000 acres have been plowed up. The outlook of winter wheat grows worse as the season advances and a conservative estimate places the shortage at 125,000,000 bushels. The national bureau reports 5 per cent. increase in the spring wheat area. Under most favorable circumstances this would make the total crop of spring wheat only 120,000,000 bushels, 5,000,000 less than the estimated shortage in winter wheat.

A Veteran Benefactor.

HIS PAST LIFE, PRESENT PLANS, AND WHAT HE HAS TO SAY UPON A SUBJECT THAT ASTONISHED HIM.

New York Times.

Nearly forty years ago a young man, of unusual endowments, began to mould public opinion upon a subject of vital importance. Like all pioneers, his early efforts were unsuccessful, but his ability and the value of his work soon won public confidence, and to-day there is not a village or hamlet in the country that has not been influenced by Dr. Dio Lewis. When, therefore, it was learned yesterday that he contemplated the establishment of a large magazine in this city, the fact was deemed so important that a representative of this paper was commissioned to see him and ascertain the truth of the rumor.

Dr. Dio Lewis is a gentleman of sixty years and weighs two hundred pounds, with snow-white hair and beard, but probably the most perfect picture of health and vigor in the metropolis. He is a living exponent of his teachings and notwithstanding the amount of work he has already done, promises still greater activity for years to come. He received the interviewer most courteously, and in reply to a question said:

"It is true I have come to New York to establish a monthly magazine. I have come here for the same reason that I went to Boston 25 years ago. Then Boston was the best platform in the country from whichto speak of education. New York has now become most hospitable to progressive thoughts, and especially so to movements on behalf of physicial training.

I have reason to know the great and abiding interest of the American people in this subject. They have come to realize that the future of our country pivots upon our physical vitality, and especially upon the vigor of our women. My new magazine will bear the title 'Dio Lewis's Monthly,' and be devoted to Sanitary and Social Science. I hope through its pages to inaugurate a new departure in hygiene."

"Have you not written several books on the subject?"

"Yes, nine volumes, and some of them like 'Our Girls,' published by the Harpers, have had an enormous circulation, but the best work of my life I shall give the world in the new magazine. Forty years of skirmishing ought to conclude with ten years of organized warfare."

"Doctor, what is the occasion of this new interest in health questions?"

"It has come through suffering, which seems the only road to self knowledge. The stomach, heart, kidneys or liver fall into trouble, happiness is gone, and then people give attention to their health."

"Which of these organs is most frequently the victim of our errors?" asked the Reporter.

"Within the last few years diseases of the kidneys have greatly multiplied. When I was engaged in practice, thirty-five and forty years ago, serius disease of the kidneys was rare; butnow dissressingly frequent and fatal."

"To what do you attribute this great increase of kidney troubles?"

"To the use of stimulating drinks, adulterated food and irregular habits of life."

"Doctor, have you any confidence in the remedy of which we hear so much now-a-days, "Warner's Safe Cure?"

"I believe in the ounce of prevention, rather than in a ton of cure."

"But have you noticed the remarkable testimonials of Warner's remedy?"

"I have, and confess that they have puzzled and astonished me. The commendations of proprietary medicines usually come from unknown persons residing in back counties. But I see in our most reputable newspapers the warmest praise of Warner's Safe Cure from College Professors, respectable physicians, and other persons of high intelligence and character. To thrust such testimony aside may be professional, but it is unmanly. No physician can forget that valuable additions to our Materia Medica have sprung from just such sources. I was so impressed with this cloud of witnesses that I purchased some bottles of Warner's Safe Cure at a neighboring drug store, and analyzed one of them to see if it contained anything poisonous. Then I took three of the prescribed doses at once, and found there was nothing injurious in it. I do not hesitate to say that if I found my kidneys in serious trouble, I should use this remedy, because of the hopelessness of all ordinary treatment, and because when a hundred intelligent and reputable persons unite in the statement that a certain remedy has cured them of a grave malady, I choose to believe that they speak the truth."

"But as you may know, my great interest in life lies in prevention. For forty years I have labored in this field. One of the phases of my work in New England was the establishment of the Ladies seminary at Lexington, Mass. My aim was to illustrate the possibilities in the physical training of girls during their school life. This institution became before I left it, the largest and most successful Semicary for young women owned and managed by one person, in our country. I sat down to dinner every day with a family of two hundred persons. The remarkable results of this muscle training among girls, were given in my paper published in the North American Review of December, 1882.

"Besides I established the Normal Institute for physical training in Boston, and for ten years was its President and Manager. Dr. Walter Channing, Dr. Thomas Hoskins, Professor Leonard, and others were among its teachers, and more than four hundred persons took its diploma and went out into all parts of the land to teach the new school of gymnastics. And now the years left to me I propose to devote to the magazine which I have come here to establish. It will be the largest periodical ever devoted to this field of literature, and will present the hundred and one questions of hygience with the simplicity of a child's talk. To this end all so-called learning will be subordinated. The magazine will be more or less illustrated, and will strive to reach a high place in the confidence and hearts of the people. In a few weeks, our first number will appear, and we shall fondly hope for it a hearty welcome."

The facts above narrated are indeed most important. It is gratifying to know that the life long experiences of a gentl man who stands without a peer in successfully demonstrating the principles of hygiene; whose heart has always been in sympathy with the afflicted, and whose brain has ever been active in planning for their relief, are to be given to the public through the pages of a magazine. And it is specially significat and proof positive of rare merit that a proprietary medicine, even with such high standing as Warner's Safe cure is known to have, should be endorsed and recommended by a man so able, so repulable and of such national renown as Dr. Dio Lewis.

Manufacture of Canes.

The manufacture of canes is by no means the simple process of cutting the sticks in the woods, peeling off the bark, whittling down the knots, sandpapering the rough surface, and adding a touch of varnish, a curiously carved handle or head, and tipping the ends with a ferule. In the sand flats of New Jersey whole families support themselves by gathering nanneberry sticks, which they gathered in the swamps, straighten with an old vise, steam over an old kettle, and perhaps scrape down or whittle into size. These are packed in large bundles to New York city and sold to the cane factories. Many imported sticks, however, have to go through a process of straightening by mechanical means, which are a mystery to the uninitiated. They are buried in hot sand until they become pliable. In front of the heap of hot sand in which the sticks are plunged is a stout board from five or six feet long, fixed at an angle inclined to the workman, and having two or more notches cut in the edge. When the stick has become perfecly pliable the workman places it ou one of the notches, and, bending it in an opposite direction to which it is naturally bent, straightens it. Thus, sticks apparently crooked, bent, warped, and worthless are by this simple process straightened; but the most curious part of the work is observed in the formation of the curl for the handle of the canes which are not naturally supplied with a hook or knob. The workman places one end of the cane firmly in a vise, and pours a continuous stream of fire from a gas pipe on the part which is to bend When sufficient heat has been applied, the cane is pulled slowly and gradually around until the hook has been compictely formed, and then secured with a string. An additional application of heat serves to bake and permanently fix the curl. The under part of the handle is frequently charred by the action of the gas, and this is rubbed down with sandpaper until the requisite degree of smoothness is obtained.

Poisoning Destructive Insects.

There is no question that Paris green, properly used, may be employed to kill nearly all noxious insects which take their food in solid form. The precautions to be obsered are, not to poison the wrong animals or human beings; not to injure the crop to which the poison is applied; to give enough to kill the depredators and to allow time for the rains to wash it off. One great advantage is that as the quantity of poison is nearly in proportion to the bulk of the animal, the minute proportion which is fatal to small insects has no effect whatever on a man, who weighs a hundred thousand times as much. Yet we would not advise any one to swallow this minutest portion and it is not indeed necessary in any case. The smallest dose of arsenic safely administered by a physician, would be instantly fatal to a multitude of small beetles. A statement has been published in some of the papers, that a cultivator protected his grapevines from the rose bug by applying the same mixture of Paris green in water that he used for potatoes. A second application was made after the rain washed off the first. It completely cleared the vines of the rose-bug and the vines were unhurt. The same water mixture may be used for the squash and cucumber bugs, only about half as strong, or else it will injure the young plants. Far insects which suck juices instead of eating solids, it is of little or no account.

Two-Horse Load of Toothpicks Daily.

Where do the toothpicks come from? A Maine newspaper states that the little town of Sebec, at the outlet of Sebec Lake, Piscataquis county, in the interior, has one of the best waterpowers in the State, but has never been fully developed. A toothpick factory there is doing a large busines, using over a thousand cords of poplar and birch wood annually, turning out a two horse load of toothpicks daily and employing twelve or fifteen girls and eight or ten men. A letter from the place states what the newspaper omitted, that "the toothpick mill gives employment to as many girls as can afford to pack a hundred boxes for twenty-five cents, and feed themselves." This seems very small wages for women, but board is cheap there, and probably many of them board at home, and would be unable to earn as much otherwise. The little stream was dammed and utilized for a fulling mill, grist mill and saw mill sixty years ago; later for a shingle and clapboard mill, and more than forty years ago a woolen cloth manufactory was erected there, which within the past year has proved a failure, the company offering fifteen per cent. to the creditors.

If Burdette were a Mule.

No wonder the mule is a kicker. Were I a mule, love, I, too, would kick. Every time I got a chance I would lift somebody higher than a kite. I know just exactly what kind of a mule I would be. A baby mule. One of these sad eyed old fellows that lean back in the breeching and think. With stripped legs like a zebra. And a dark brown streak down my back, and a paint brush tail. And my mane cut short, and my foretop banged, and a head as long as a flour barrel, and I'd be worth two hundred and a half in any market and I'd wear a flat harness and no blinders, and some day, when some man hitched me up to a dray, and piled on a ton and a half of pig iron, a cord of wood, six barrels of flour, a good load of household goods and a steamboat boiler. I would start off with it patiently and haul it steadily until I got to the top of the grade on the new road around North Hill, and right about there and then a falling maple leaf, fluttering down in a spark of gold and crimson, would scare me all but to death, and the authorities would have to drag the Mississippi river six weeks to find all that load and some of that driver, while in three minutes after the emeute I would be tranquilly browsing on the grassy heights that smile above the silver flowing river. That is the kind of a mule I would be.—Hawkeye.

John Milton, received less than $100 for "Paradise Lost," but John L. Sullivan received more than $1500 for pitching in a base ball game.

Some clever satirist has discovered that the reason men succeed who mind their own business is because there is so little competition.

A man by the name of Shakhands John died recently in Nevada. He was not a politician, as many might infer from his name, but only an Indian.

Queen Victoria had plenty of surgical attendance upon her injured knee, but none of the doctors had wit enough to prescribe court plaster.
